

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN AND ABOUT TOWN

Happenings of the Day in Various Parts of the Nation's Capital.

The snow and bad weather that spread over Washington yesterday brought gain to at least one individual.

Just when the wind was driving the snow down the neck of the pedestrian, a man, hurrying along the Avenue, suddenly stopped in front of a store where, outside, in an umbrella stand, were a number of new umbrellas for sale.

The umbrella that the man, who could safely be described as "sleazy," carried was old and had seen hard service. The ribs were bent and small holes were visible.

The sleazy one gently placed his worn rain stick to rest with the others in the stand and went inside the store. For several minutes he appeared to be discussing with the clerk the merits or demerits of an article on sale. Then, apparently dissatisfied with the bargain, he left the store. After carefully ascertaining that no clerk was observing him, he removed from the umbrella stand, not the one that he had placed there, but a new, whole, protective one. Without a glance behind, he walked rapidly away.

There is no record of a second-hand umbrella being sold at that store today.
